While this caught everyone off guard, and feels horrible to have them take such a stance like this, I do feel this will backfire and not change the position we are in at all. If anything, it has turned the internet even more against Blake and Ryan because they have seen the press first hand.

I spoke with justin.
Here's my honest thoughts.
No it's not perfect. There is some misinformation here for sure. And yet... I see this as a win. Let her be praised by Sony. Who cares. It's not a bullet at us. Finally, there is an article that is not directed at Justin.
And who knows maybe Blake and Ryan forced Sony to put something out on their behalf. Even if they did it on their own volition, who cares, the industry knows the truth we know the truth. Whether or not 12 or 100 fans read that and believe it, it does not matter. As I've said many times, Sony's job is to promote the movie and to make as much money as they can. That's the only reason why we partnered with them. And they are doing just that. I don't expect them to be any different than who they have always been and who they are. And the fact they are cozying up to Blake, also makes sense. If they are even doing that. They are a business that is protecting their own bottom line. What Wayfarer stands for is what Wayfarer stands for and I don't expect anyone else to. If we can get some things corrected great, if not, who cares. And honestly, I don't care who Sony nestles up to. As long as they can put out a movie of ours and make money so that we can be Wayfarer and do what we do then I am good. Let's not lose sight of the big picture. Right now that's keeping bullets away from you Justin away from me and away from Wayfarer. And if that comes at the expense of her being praised, then so be it. And that is the win.

And yet I get it's frustrating.

Yeah we saw and flagged that earlier. And of course there are people who speculate and discuss and poke holes, that's how they make a living on the internet. The minority may feel loud as we have discussed, but it's still the minority.

Yes we are keeping eyes on it all. And yet... let's not be dissuaded by the 10 percent. We know there will be people who fan the fire from the east, but if the majority are speaking from the west, then damnit let's live in the west and simply keep an eye on the east. Yes I'm now a poet.

Also... it's late on the east coast and we are probably keeping people up. Let's go dark.

I personally am not concerned about this.

Because we all know there are no dark and disturbing stories .

It's just socials acting exactly how they always act in any situation

They want more clicks they want more views and let the end of the day they will all be regurgitating complete rubbish.

And referencing the Australian podcast you saw - that's complete garbage. I can tell you hand on my heart there was four human women working on that trial and I was one of them. Not one Russian bot in site- it's actually very similar to what you're having right now the outpouring of love and support being weaponised against you by her side because "it can't be true"

This video is great and we have pushed it out digitally. In terms of you posting it yourself, I would avoid re-sharing anything that's essentially a response to negative feedback - as caption here is "...responds to critics who say film glorifies DV.." I think these next few days, regarding what you post on your personal channels, we should focus more on the positive feedback, responses, continuing to highlight the themes of the film, etc.

Colleen just texted this to us- first time we've heard from her

Can someone please Send Jamey the actual context of what I said so he can respond to Colleen. This should be on video recorded from the wrap.
I never said I changed his fate - I said I didn't want to see him at the end of the movie as it was too complicated to explain how he was co parenting and would draw too many people in and SHE agreed. This has nothing to do with the book and we don't control the wrap and their headlines just as we don't control all the negative and untrue things she and Blake have been saying about me and the controversy they created. We haven't leaked anything and we've taken the high road the whole time even after she betrayed me and ghosted me.

Jamey and I spoke. They are deleting the post. Take this opportunity open up the dialogue with her. Apologize, communicate that if you read the interview it doesn't mean he's cut out of the sequel but it was the decision of how to end the film. You explain it all in quotes within. Use this opportunity to connect with her and commiserate with what she's going through and how much you care about her and how that hasn't changed even when she TURNED HER BACK ON YOU AND LEFT YOU TO FEND FOR YOURSELF. She is getting a ton of hate and backlash from the DV community.

Fully understand and respect that, Jamey is working through a response. Instead of thinking of this as an olive branch, this is a tactical art of war approach. If Colleen can come around and is willing to open up lines of communication, that would be a massive message to the world that this issue solely relates to BLAKE and not to "all of the women".

I'm going to dictate something, Jamie add this to your text message back to her in any part that you want but this is just what I need to say

Justin is not out to hurt anybody and there hasn't been one lie that has come out of his mouth, all he's been doing is singing the praises of you and everybody else and sticking to the message of the movie which you knew he cared about from the beginning. He asked you about the second book to understand the trajectory of Ryles character as he was developing the script, which you also understood as he included you on that decision. The above headline is taken completely out of context, but that is not our doing, as there is a PR war going on and we are the ones that are not leaking anything or trying to destroy anybody. This entire situation was set up to be a smear campaign against Justin and it clearly backfired. Justin didn't want any of this as he's loved and adored you for five years, if you actually read the interview you'll see he says exactly as it happened, which was a decision that you also supported. It had nothing to do with the second book or not wanting to be a part of it as an actor or changing Ryles fate. It had everything to do with after seeing an edit of the movie, realizing that we did not need to open up a can of worms and show an abuser coparenting without showing all of the necessary work that had to happen to make that possible. You also know this as he involved you every step of the way. Wayfarer is also not talking and are not firing back, we are continually speaking highly of everyone. We did not ask to be in the situation. This was all created and easily could've been avoided.

I think your response was way too nice dude and I'm a bit frustrated, but I understand the game you're playing

Justin— please know that I'm not saying this to dismiss your completely warranted feelings about this but I would be remiss if I didn't advise that I feel strongly about you also responding from the heart since you are also on this text. It may be a futile attempt, but think of it as part of the larger strategy. I drafted something in case you might consider.

I'm going to dictate something. Jamie add this to your text message back to her in any part that you want but this is just what I need to say

Justin is not out to hurt anybody and there hasn't been one lie that has come out of his mouth, all he's been doing is singing the praises of you and everybody else and sticking to the message of the movie which you knew he cared about from the beginning. He asked you about the second book to understand the trajectory of Ryles character as he was developing the script, which you also understood as he included you on that decision. The above headline is taken completely out of context, but that is not our doing, as there is a PR war going on and we are the ones that are not leaking anything or trying to destroy anybody.
This entire situation was set up to be a smear campaign against Justin and it clearly backfired. Justin didn't want any of this as he's loved and adored you for five years. If you actually read the interview you'll see he says exactly as it happened, which was a decision that you also supported. It had nothing to do with the second book or not wanting to be a part of it as an actor or changing Ryles fate. It had everything to do with after seeing an edit of the movie, realizing that we did not need to open up a can of worms and show an abuser coparenting without showing all of the necessary work that had to happen to make that possible. You also know this as he involved you every step of the way. Wayfarer is also not talking and are not firing back, we are continually speaking highly of everyone. We did not ask to be in the situation. This was all created and easily could've been avoided.

Justin should not respond right now except for anything other than to validate what I said. You are full of emotion and you were react and it could add to the fire instead of us trying to put it out. The last thing we need is Colleen speaking publicly about you in a negative way. That's all that matters right now is to put out that fire.

Colleen, I'm sorry that you are hurting. I want you to know that there has not been one lie that has come out of my mouth or one bad word spoken about any of you. I am also not talking about my experience. I have been sticking to the same message of the movie which you know I cared deeply about from the beginning. The headline is taken out of context which you will see from the interview. I spoke about this multiple times and they also don't include everything I say. None of which has anything to do with changing his trajectory in the second book which I of course asked about multiple times to understand where the story goes. You supported my decision to remove him from the end. We do not control the headlines. "It just feels like I'm on an island, here. When the hate is being directed at me, you guys posting that article and allowing it to fuel the comments is hurtful. And the timing of it just feels like you're worried about your image but not the women who are behind this story. I know things took an awful turn, and I felt forced to choose when I did not want to, but the back and forth articles from both camps are just so upsetting and ridiculous. It's making everyone working on this movie look immature. Everyone is out there trying to save themselves and now this has turned into a huge mess. And I know you guys think I've made decisions for certain reasons but I have felt the rift from long before I ever was in contact with Blake. It started with me not being allowed to read the script until I was sat with readers, but then all the interviews made it seem like you included me in the script from the beginning. Then the whole documentary thing where I said no so very many times. And the book, when I asked you guys to at least donate a portion of the proceeds to DV and then I was told the only way a donation would be made is if I took 1% and donated that myself. Then the whole tattoo thing, all the texts of you blaming Blake for that and reiterating that she didn't read the book every time I'd just try to ask you what to say to readers. I have been disappointed personally by your actions many times. I appreciate that you haven't directly said anything negative, that's how it should be. But you are grown men with a platform. You know how to use it to protect your image. Please don't continue to use it to harm me or mine. That's all I'm asking."

I am deeply sorry to hear about the pain you're experiencing. Feeling alone on an island is just terrible. I want you to know, with all sincerity, that my team hasn't engaged in anything that would harm you and they have not contributed to any negative articles. My heart breaks when I think about the distance that has grown between us, especially when I've always valued our collaboration and friendship so deeply.

(I don't think we need the following paragraph at all as there no need to make this about you right now. We shouldn't ask for her sympathy at this moment)

I want to share how difficult it has been for me too, especially when the film, which I poured so much of my heart into, was taken out of my hands. I've remained silent as fans began to wonder why I wasn't part of the press or even the photos at the premiere. Being uninvited from Book Bonanza without any explanation left me feeling lost and hurt. Not being allowed to share the premiere with you and instead waiting in a basement until I was escorted to a separate theatre with my friends and family, who had come to celebrate, was incredibly painful. Still, I did so out of respect for the movie and not wanting to derail the celebration of it.

I know a lot has happened since we first worked on the script together and you feel as though you weren't included before the 'fan reading'. As an effort to remind you, we sent you the script beforehand in July of 2022 where you responded with such positivity, noting how pleased you were that it stayed true to the book and you even shared your notes with me. I'm happy to share those screenshots if you'd like.

Regarding the documentary, I want you to know that while we may have tried to ease some of your concerns regarding being on camera, we always intended to respect your wishes, which is why we never moved forward. It was only an idea, meant to bring fans closer to a story that means so much to so many.

Regarding the Coffee Book donation. Legally, Wayfarer couldn't donate the 1% on your behalf as you graciously requested. It wasn't a demand from us, but a legal requirement we were asked to relay.

As for the tattoo, I'm so glad you pointed out the importance of it to the fans and the DV community while we were early in the edit. We were more than happy to change it in post and the film is better for it. I'm grateful for your insight.

I completely own that I vented about many things regarding production and the post process and I can fully understand how that could have been a load too heavy to carry.. Please know that my door is always open to you. I truly hope we can talk and rebuild our friendship. This isn't about any "image" for me; it's about reconnecting with someone I care about deeply. I hope this might be a step towards healing and celebrating this film together.

you're experiencing. Feeling alone on an island is just terrible. I want you to know, with all sincerity, that my team hasn't engaged in anything that would harm you and they have not contributed to any negative articles. My heart breaks when I think about the distance that has grown between us, especially when I've always valued our collaboration and friendship so deeply.

I know a lot has happened since we first worked on the script together and you feel as though you weren't included before the "fan reading". As an effort to remind you, we sent you the script beforehand in July of 2022 where you responded with such positivity, noting how pleased you were that it stayed true to the book and you even shared your notes with me. You even got to read it before I did. I'm happy to share those screenshots if you'd like.

Regarding the documentary, I want you to know that while Jamey may have tried to ease some of your concerns regarding being on camera, he and Wayfarer always intended to respect your wishes, which is why we never moved forward. It was only an idea, meant to bring fans closer to a story that means so much to so many. Once you shared your feelings and anxiety about being on camera, he completely understood and we immediately killed the idea.

Regarding the Coffee Book donation. Legally, Wayfarer couldn't donate the 1% on your behalf as you graciously requested. It wasn't a demand from us, but a legal requirement we were asked to relay.

As for the tattoo, I'm so glad you pointed out the importance of it to the fans and the DV community while we were in the edit. We were more than happy to change it in post and the film is better for it. I'm grateful for your insight.

I completely own that I vented about many things regarding production and the post process and I can fully understand how that could have been a load too heavy to carry.. Please know that my door is always open to you. I truly hope we can talk and rebuild our friendship. This isn't about any "image" for me; it's about reconnecting with someone I care about deeply. I hope this might be a step towards healing and celebrating this film together.

I'm deeply sorry to hear this. I want you to know, with all sincerity, that my team hasn't contributed to any negative articles. We would never go out of our way to harm you, or anyone who is part of this film, which I hope is evident from every time I have spoken publicly. I've always valued your collaboration, your trust, and your friendship and that hasn't changed.

I know a lot has happened since we first worked on the script together, but it pains me to hear that this is how you feel. If you might recall, we sent you the script before the fan reading in July 2022 and you responded positively, acknowledging how pleased you were that it stayed true to the book. You shared some great notes with me, which were crucial to the development. You even got to read it before I did! I'm happy to share those screenshots of our texts and emails as I want to make sure to clear this up however I can.

Regarding the documentary, I want you to know that while Jamey may have tried to ease some of your concerns regarding being on camera, he and Wayfarer always respected how you felt about this which is why we never moved forward. It was only an idea, meant to bring fans closer to a story that means so much to so many. Once you shared your feelings he completely understood and we immediately killed the idea.

Regarding the Coffee Book donation, legally, Wayfarer couldn't donate the 1% on your behalf as you graciously offered. It wasn't a demand from us, but a legal requirement we were asked to relay.

As for the tattoo, I'm so glad you pointed out the importance of it to the fans and the DV community while we were in the edit. We were more than happy to change it in post and the film is better for it.

I completely own that I vented to you about what I was going through during production and expressed several of my frustrations. Because of our friendship that had grown over our work together for the past several years, I felt like it was a safe space to do so. I didn't think that it would burden you in any way, and I'm sorry if that was callous of me.

Please know that my door is always open to you. I truly hope we can talk and rebuild our friendship. This isn't about "image" for me. I took this on because of your trust in me to tell this story, and I truly want this communication to be the first step to healing for us both. If you feel comfortable speaking, I'd really like for us to find some time to connect by phone but will take your lead.

"I did mistype and say read the script but I meant I wasn't allowed to discuss the script when we sat with readers, or speak in the meeting about the script, you asked me to not say anything. I'm aware I read the script. I'm not saying I had a problem with it, I don't need proof of me saying I liked it. I did love the script and I love the movie and I'll support it always. I think you guys did a fantastic job making this film and I loved Blake's edits also. I'll never say otherwise and spoke so highly of everyone on my press tour, even though the media wants to spread that you weren't mentioned. I sang everyone's praises. My issues lie in things I've learned since then and experiences I've personally had with you. And I'm not about to go back and forth on the stuff above that's written in a way that will protect you if it gets leaked. I also have screen shots I can share with you as you offered above, like the ones where I simply asked about the tattoo and you blamed it on Blake more than once. I know that Blake is not to blame for the tattoo and the point I was making is that twice I was lied to about that in text in what felt like an attempt to get me to dislike her. But you call it venting, so we do disagree there. I'm walking away from this for a few months. I don't have a PR team and I have no idea how to respond to this, no one from either studio has advised how to navigate what is happening the last couple of days. I hope Wayfarer or Sony at least reach out and offer some support to Isabela and Alex. They're very new to this and I'm worried about them if they're also not being reached out to with advice or resources. Surely there's some kind of therapist referral list on hand that can be provided to them if one hasn't been already.

As for us, I feel like we can agree to disagree on our experiences. I don't see a relationship in the future, as I don't think I can trust anyone from this process to be a part of my life. But I wish no one ill will. Onward."

I'm writing this to get this out of my system. I'm not sending it.

I'm sorry to hear this, but I need to express how I feel. Why didn't you come to me if something bothered you? We had open communication and a friendship. You knew the effort and sacrifices that went into this film from the beginning, and you were always included. Your thoughts and opinions were always respected, so I don't understand why you wouldn't have just talked to me.

I didn't lie to you about the tattoo, though in hindsight, I shouldn't have blamed Blake. I was upset that she didn't read the book, amongst many other things. After your text, I revisited the original designs of the hallowed heart, and you're right—Blake wasn't to blame. That was my mistake. The original design missed the opening in the middle, and Blake had commissioned a tattoo artist to design it to her liking without even consulting me. I assumed the first design had the opening but I realized that was a detail I missed in the chaos. I understand why you felt deceived, but it wasn't my intention. I was pissed at her and venting which was the first time I did that with you - and if you felt uncomfortable, I wish you would have told me—I would have apologized immediately.

The last time we spoke, you complimented me and expressed your gratitude for my efforts to honor the book. Then, suddenly, you disappeared, and I learned from the studio that you would only promote Blake's cut of the movie. I was forced to step down and let her finish the film, even though it performed worse. You cut off all communication, unfollowed me, along with the rest of the cast. I was devastated.

At that dinner, I told you everything that happened, including my mistakes. I don't know what was said behind the scenes, but this entire situation could have been avoided if we had communicated like mature adults. I have not engaged in any PR to harm anyone. Instead, I was isolated, excluded from the process, and treated like an outcast. I had to do all the press on my own, and I wasn't even invited to my own premiere. When I did attend, I was relegated to a basement with my family and friends, separated from everyone else, and told to leave early and that we could not attend our own after party.

I don't know what terrible things you heard about me that would be deserving of your actions, but all I can say is that what you all did was heartbreak and it has deeply affected my life and family. This wasn't just about the film—it was a betrayal of our friendship. And to be okay with Blake and Ryan run a smear campaign against me and leak their grievances to the press after taking over the film and excluding me from the press and premier when all of this could've just been handled like mature adults makes it even more heartbreak.

But yes. Onward.

Jennifer and Matthew

"Hi Justin- Congrats on the opening of It Ends With Us. I've been traveling the last week but look forward to seeing it in the theatre this weekend. The issue of domestic violence is very important to me. I served on the board of Tubman (the largest domestic violence agency in Minnesota) for over fifteen years. The staff, led by my friend Jen Polzin, is doing lifesaving work in Minneapolis St. Paul.

I have a request and an opportunity. myTalk 107.1 is one of the radio stations I run in MSP. It's a talk radio station aimed at women. While the radio station is typically pop culture and entertainment-based, it has a long history of taking on tough issues that are important to women. In the past myTalk 107.1 has been nationally recognized for our honest conversations and building awareness about issues like bullying, suicide, sexual harassment and transgender rights . It Ends With Us is creating a lot of talk. We would like to use the movie as the catalyst for a roundtable discussion about domestic violence. The roundtable will be hosted by myTalk host, Colleen Lindstrom, who has won national AWM Gracie Awards for her work in public affairs. The roundtable will also feature experts from Tubman. The idea is a one hour live roundtable during afternoon drive on the radio that will also be available on-demand as a podcast and YouTube video.

We would love you join us. I know your heart and I know how important it is to you that this movie be used to effect change. We want to use your work to spark a conversation about domestic violence, an issue that is often hard to talk about. I can promise you our staff and Tubman will remain solely focused on the issue of domestic violence. We don't have a time or date, but we feel like the window is the next 7-10 days to direct the conversations about this movie to what is truly important—ending domestic violence. Your role can be as simple as a 5-10 minute introduction to set the table for the conversation, or you can join us for the entire segment.

Thank you, Justin."

Ok. Here's my thoughts on the video. Can we tweak a thing or two? Sure..Might he mention something more directly about the kids? Maybe.. might he also be more specific about the how we made this to protect harm and we shouldn't be harming real life cast? Maybe... however with that said. This is what people want. This is justin.

Put this out or a version of this out.
No surprise these are my thoughts.

I wonder if another source can say that the reason we have an August release was because she refused to promote the movie and insisted on infringing on the directors editorial rights

Updated suggested script. We just spoke to Jamey and he has a few thoughts on a potential reposition. We will standby as you guys workshop further. In the meantime, I encourage everyone to read that TMZ article, it's very strategic in our opinion the quotes about the entire cast standing by her to create further divide.

For the video, it was also a little too slow. I think you can still be thoughtful but mindful of the pacing to ensure people listen to the whole thing and also media when pulling quotes.

Hey, everyone.

I just wanted to make a video. I'm not going to ignore what's happening. It's been a crazy week and a half and I'm so honored, we all are here at Wayfarer, that this film that we have all poured our lives into is being so well received all over the world.

And I just want to say thank you. To everyone who's gone to see this movie, to all people who have gone to see the movie. Thank you. Thank you for showing up.

We would not be here if it weren't for Colleen who trusted us with her story, and for our partners at no more who put so much time into guiding us. I underestimated how prevalent this issue is, and I especially want to say thank you to all of you who are coming out and sharing your stories. That is why we made the movie. That's it.

I always said, if there was just one person who saw this film, read this story, and felt brave enough to leave their abusive relationship, it would have been worth it. And to those who have sent messages, left comments, DMs, everything, I can't even begin to tell you how much this has all touched me and our team. Thank you.

But with that, I just want to remind everybody that that's what we should be focused on, the bravery, the strength, the education, the resources. That's what this is all about. The noise is starting to overpower the message and I want to urge all of us to refocus on the issue. Without the people in this film, the entire cast, the crew, everyone involved, none of this would be possible. Everyone deserves to be celebrated right now.

That's all I wanted to say. I hope everyone has a wonderful weekend, go see the film if you haven't already, and remember to lead with kindness. Thank you again from the bottom of my heart.

I mean... yes... but nothing to necessarily prepare for. Paps are absolutely being more mindful of capturing children because they've been sued so many darn times and the nicer you are and more willing to say hi the easier they will be on you. Just keep being you and doing your thing. You're not someone we worry about

Also for the theater visits, I'll be able to swing by the grove visit but not able to go to the other ones. I have to be home around 4pm for our contractor who needs to be let in to do some work on our house and then have to come back before they leave. Just so you're aware!! Sorry I wasn't able to shift the appointment

Let's boost this instead of you posting it. Some of the comments reference Colleen romanticizing dv and we don't want it to be interpreted as a dig at anyone. I know the video has nothing to do with it but let's instead have third parties amplify instead of you right now

Hey Tag team, I've been seeing some IG comments on random posts defending me by people who are private with no followers and they feel like bots. Can you please confirm we are not doing any of that? I really don't want bots defending me as it feeds into their potential narrative

I can fully fully confirm we do not have bots . This is not also what we do- bots look fake to anyone.

The other team is doing something very specific in terms of what they do. I know Jamey &Jed connected on this.

Bots and fan accounts also run pretty organically by now with all the AI platforms and Google Analytics itself - there is no bot army that's a myth these days.

Any digital team these days is far more intelligent to utilise something so obvious.
